Greenergy targets North West with tankage at Eastham

- Move from South East sees Greenergy's low cost fuels available UK-wide

London: Greenergy, the £1.5 billion turnover European fuels business, announced today [7 July 2005] availability of its low cost diesel and petrol offering from the Kaneb Terminal at Eastham in Cheshire.

The new tankage comes in addition to existing facilities in the South East, which typically supply some 50 million litres of fuel per week to a variety of forecourt operators and commercial customers. Andrew Owens, Chairman of Greenergy Fuels Ltd commented:

“Greenergy’s ability to compete on price has meant rapidly growing diesel and petrol sales over a number of years, taking us today to a five per cent share of the UK road fuels market – historically supplied exclusively out of the South East.

“As of today we will also be offering customers in the North West a new choice when purchasing diesel and petrol – a choice of quality fuels at the lowest costs. We look forward to growing our share of this market.”

Greenergy also announced that the first retail customer for their new tankage facility is Tesco in a deal to supply 31 forecourts across the North West and North Wales.

The announcement follows a year that has seen a significant expansion of Greenergy’s core fuel businesses alongside consolidation of its leading position in the fast emerging biofuels sector:

- Greenergy secured the first major UK supply contract for bio-ethanol blended petrols to 150 Tesco forecourts;
- go-ahead was secured for the build of the UK’s largest single-line biodiesel production facility on the Humber servicing UK and European markets;
- work with the farming community saw over 1200 farmers sign-up to its ground breaking Field to Forecourt biocrops contract;
